Preserving Native Families (PNF)

Working to keep tribal children safe and with their own families

Tribal citizens, are you eligible for Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) benefits? Are you a TANF client already? Read on!

Please Note: PNF does not provide monetary support, but PNF caseworkers can help identify additional resources.

What is PNF?

PNF is a program that provides intensive in-home, preventative services to tribal citizens.

Need a Helping Hand?

Do you sometimes wish you had a helping hand in your home? Or someone to help drive your family to an appointment or help you complete an application?

Do you have questions as a parent about how to deal with issues with your children?

Do you wish you had someone to help you understand what resources and support you might be eligible for?

PNF Can Help!

PNF Caseworkers

Think of a PNF caseworker as that “someone” or helping hand, looking out for you and your children, connecting you to resources, and offering support when you need it.

How Can I Get Involved in PNF?

TANF Referral

Ask your TANF specialist to refer you to the PNF program. TANF will set up a time for you to meet with a PNF caseworker and get you connected with the supports that you and your children need.

Self Referral

You can participate in this program without a TANF referral. Contact the Tribal Family & Youth Services department at 907.463.7167 or tfys@ccthita-nsn.gov.

State of Alaska Referral

State of Alaska, Office of Children’s Services (OCS) Family Service Unit can request intensive in-home services.
